Joy Lenz
COO of Yohana

With over three decades of experience building, scaling, and leading high-performance engineering teams, Joy Lenz has a proven track record of improving efficiency for startups and legendary technology companies. Highly respected within the tech and business communities, she's worked alongside Silicon Valley leaders and CEOs, playing an integral part in shaping innovation and culture in Silicon Valley and beyond.

Before taking her current role at Yohana, she brought her unique team-building approach to various technology companies – including developing enterprise software at Borland; building one of the first internet browsers at Netscape; developing voice command at Tellme Networks (acquired by Microsoft); innovating the smart home industry at Nest; and joining Google's healthcare organization. Fun fact: She once extended 206 job offers in one day!
